

---

Subject: Dr Feriduni or Dr Devroye for FUE?

Posted by looking4ht on Mon, 08 Aug 2011 04:01:57 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

First of all greetings to this forum as it has been very helpful for me in my research for possible HT for last few months even though I don't speak Dutch (but google translator has been of assistance). As I don't speak Dutch, unfortunately, so I hope the forum would let me write up in English and I'll also be able to collect some valuable (life-saving) information.

I've been looking to have HT for the last couple of years and been researching actively and at times passively. According to my research, the most sought out HT clinics in Europe are in Belgium for hair transplant. Having collected all the possible information online I had a trip to Brussels couple of months ago to have face to face consultation with all the possible options in Belgium. Long story short, having met few of the doctors face to face, I have trimmed down my options to 2 doctors: Dr. Feriduni and Dr. Devroye.

Now, the problem is that I can't decide between the two. Therefore I am turning to this forum and would be really grateful if someone can give me some feedback and real life experiences of those clinics, so that I can finally make the decision where to go. Any links to thread which have discussed the above doctors, would also be useful.

Just a background of my situation: I'm about NW 4-5, According to the feedback from consultations (both online and face to face), I need about 5000-6000 grafts which could be accomplished in 2 surgeries using FUE. I have found consensus among clinics that I have good donor and that many grafts are available.

Really looking forward to collecting feedback.

Thanks!!

---