Hallo Tom,

der Patient ist 37Jahre alt!

Und hier von dem Patienten persönlich über seine Medikation aus einem anderen Forum zitiert:

"I was on Finasteride for only about a month before the HT, as I mentioned I was trying a different approach to taking it (3mg per week) to avoid previous side effects and it was fine. However I have currently decided to stop taking it because I have started 2.5mg Oral Minoxidil and I just thought I'd like to see clearly what effect that has without any other factors, which I felt comfortable doing as I'd only just started Finasteride so wouldn't lose any gains. I don't know if this is the right move, as taking both would have a better effect - but I would like to see what Oral Minoxidil can do on it's own. The reason is that I'd like to avoid taking Finasteride if possible, so want to see how it goes, it's something that's under consideration for me so will keep pondering on it. The shaved right down crown is looking quite weak when this area was always ok until a few months before the HT, so perhaps I will end up deciding it's best to take action with the Finasteride on this after all.

The 2.5mg Oral Minoxidil is just a tester to see how it goes, I will up to 5mg after maybe another month, as this was the prescribed dose. Oral Minoxidil is not that frequently taken by hairloss sufferers as far as I can tell but from my research (and Dr. Bisanga's advice) it seems like the risk is minimal and frequently over-blown in forums. When it's used for blood pressure, patients take 10-40mg, which is substantially more than the 2.5-5mg for hair loss.

As a side-note I've always had big gaps on the cheeks for my beard (more hair not in the right place!), anecdotally I've heard that beard growth is a potential side-effect of Oral Minoxidil so it'd be fantastic if I do get some more growth there, fingers are crossed.

I'm also taking 1mg Biotin and 1000mg of MSM and probably will for the year to support hair growth."

Hoffe das hilft!

Viele Grüsse
