

---

Subject: Mal ne Frage

Posted by hutch on Sat, 08 Sep 2007 16:15:32 GMT

View Forum Message <> Reply to Message

---

Habe neulich in einem Englischforum diesen Artikel gelesen:

"Propecia maintains what you have by not allowing DHT to get to your hair follicles. Yes your hair will become more healthy because the hair follicle will have time to repair itself. Think of it as building a house. Before Propecia you put a brick on top of a brick (nutrients) and someone takes a brick from you (DHT) so the house (hair follicle) is never made. Of course you might get some additional regrowth from Propecia but this hair follicle hadn't died yet.

Rogaine foam is a more powerful growth stimulant than Propecia but of course it doesn't block DHT. the foam is like putting 100 bricks down and the other guy taking one brick away.

My point is you need to start Rogaine as soon as possible because the foam will stimulate any follicles which are on their last leg. Once you get the regrowth the Propecia will guard these follicles. However if you wait five years and your hairline has receded a bit then the Rogaine will give you regrowth but it won't be as much as if you used it now. In summary get as much regrowth as possible then guard it with anti-androgens."

Ich find den Inhalt, mit meinem jetzigen Wissen, recht treffend. Nun meine Frage (bitte keine Grundsatzdiskussion, ob und was wirkt und schädlich ist): Mal angenommen durch Minox etc. wachsen neue Haare, kann man diese Haare dann später alleine durch Einnahme von FIN vor erneutem Ausfall schützen oder fallen diese nach Absetzen von Minox etc. wieder aus.

Von meiner "laienhaftien" Logik müssten die Haare doch bleiben! Wenn einer ne Erklärung hat warum nicht, bitte mitteilen. Danke!

---